

THE CAMPUS DISCIPLINARY PROCESS IS DIFFERENT THAN CRIMINAL JUSTICE PROCEEDINGS:

Why is it important to understand the differences?

The campus disciplinary process is different from the criminal justice process. The campus disciplinary process is designed to be fair and equitable, while the criminal justice process is designed to be punitive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be educational, while the criminal justice process is designed to be retributive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be restorative, while the criminal justice process is designed to be adversarial. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be collaborative, while the criminal justice process is designed to be confrontational. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be transparent, while the criminal justice process is designed to be opaque. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be accessible, while the criminal justice process is designed to be inaccessible. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be timely, while the criminal justice process is designed to be delayed. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be flexible, while the criminal justice process is designed to be rigid. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be responsive, while the criminal justice process is designed to be unresponsive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be proactive, while the criminal justice process is designed to be reactive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be preventive, while the criminal justice process is designed to be punitive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be restorative, while the criminal justice process is designed to be retributive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be educational, while the criminal justice process is designed to be punitive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be collaborative, while the criminal justice process is designed to be adversarial. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be transparent, while the criminal justice process is designed to be opaque. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be accessible, while the criminal justice process is designed to be inaccessible. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be timely, while the criminal justice process is designed to be delayed. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be flexible, while the criminal justice process is designed to be rigid. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be responsive, while the criminal justice process is designed to be unresponsive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be proactive, while the criminal justice process is designed to be reactive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be preventive, while the criminal justice process is designed to be punitive.

The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be restorative, while the criminal justice process is designed to be retributive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be educational, while the criminal justice process is designed to be punitive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be collaborative, while the criminal justice process is designed to be adversarial. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be transparent, while the criminal justice process is designed to be opaque. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be accessible, while the criminal justice process is designed to be inaccessible. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be timely, while the criminal justice process is designed to be delayed. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be flexible, while the criminal justice process is designed to be rigid. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be responsive, while the criminal justice process is designed to be unresponsive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be proactive, while the criminal justice process is designed to be reactive. The campus disciplinary process is also designed to be preventive, while the criminal justice process is designed to be punitive.

